Date of seminar: 11/02/2026

Venue: Computer Laboratory, Berhampore College

Organised by Department of Economics

The NEP-2020 introduces a wide scope for the students to actively participate in various departmental programmes like debates, paper presentations, seminars, exclusively organised for the benefits of the students. As per the NEP guideline, the Department of Economics, Berhampore College, was organised a second phase of students' seminar on 'Emerging Trends of Indian Economy' at the Computer Laboratory, Berhampore College.

In this seminar, two students, Kousani Saha and Manasi Karmakar, have actively participated. They were assigned two topics related on Indian agriculture and small-scale industries respectively. They have presented their respective papers, and made a sincere effort from their end to make the seminar success. However, one student was absent in the seminar.

Kousani Saha addressed several issues related to problems and prospects of India agriculture in recent decade and highlighted the reasons behind low productivity, indebtedness of the farmer, issues of technological advancement and government intervention.

Manasi Karmakar elaborated the importance of small-scale industries in India and its recent progress. She has shed light on contribution of small-scale industries on employment, GDP, and how it promotes balanced regional development.

Outcome: Overall, this Students' Seminar was highly informative and successful in achieving its benchmarks. Hopefully, this initiative as per NEP-2020 guidelines will help the students of Economics Department achieve a great exposure for their future career growth.

The seminar ended with a vote of thanks.
